Our customers and the public generally will find that our motto of

"Large Sales & Small Profits,"

Will be strictly adhered to in the future, as in the past, and it will ever be our aim to supply them with the BEST GOODS, AT THE LOWEST POSSIBLE PRICE.

Our acceptable, agreeable and fair way of dealing on the Loan system, is fully exemplified by its tremendous popularity and success during the past season. It is considered by all unbiassed minds as one of the greatest blessings and advantages to those of moderate means, and the plan is on the same principle as that in our Savings Banks, where they loan money on colateral security, and the benefit derived from it can be testified to by thousands of families who are thus placed in possession of comfortable and even richly-furnished dwellings, by our system of weekly and monthly payments.

Rupert Holmes' Mistake.

"Confound it!"

The exclamation was a mental one, but was none the less hearty for being suppressed; and others will own that it was only natural and excusable under the circumstances.

Rupert Holmes was a hard-working barrister, and was looked upon as a rising man; that is, although he was only two-and-thirty, he was making an income of nearly five hundred a year. He had besides, some little fortune of his own; and was, therefore, far better off than the great majority of men of his own age in the profession.

It was the first day of vacation; and as he threw aside his legal books and started for his holiday, he felt for the first time how his hard work had told upon him, and how glad he was that he was going away for awhile from his close chambers and the weary work of splitting legal hairs.

Generally an early riser, he had breakfasted late—so late that he was obliged to hurry through his packing in order to catch his train for Chichester, where he was going to spend a fortnight with his friend Jack Wilmot, before starting for a long ramble upon the Continent. He had, however, reached the terminus with five minutes to spare; he had found an empty carriage, had tipped the guard to retain it for him—it was before the happy era of smoking carriages—and was looking forward to the placid enjoyment of his after-breakfast cigar. The bell rang, the train was upon the very point of starting, and his cigar case was in his hand, when there was a bustle on the platform, and a porter hurried up to the carriage with two ladies, looked in, and unlocked the door.

"Now, ladies, look sharp, please; the train's starting."

The ladies entered, the door was slammed to, and the train moved out of the station.

It must be allowed that it was excusable under the circumstances for Rupert Holmes to relieve his feelings by this mental exclamation of "Confound it!"

The ladies were evidently mother and daughter. There was a strong resemblance between them, although the expression was different. The mother was fair, placid and quiet looking, rather flurried at present by the bustle consequent upon being late. The daughter was a brunette, with a demure look through which the fun rippled out at every movement of the lips and eyes; and it was at once evident by the little anxious glances she shot at Rupert Holmes as he put his cigar case back into his pocket, that she understood his feelings quite as well as if he had spoken that silent "Confound it!" aloud.

Rupert caught the look, and could scarcely help smiling in return. He then examined his Bradshaw, and ran his fingers down the list; and having resolved upon changing carriages at Reigate, determined to make himself agreeable and enjoy himself as much as he could till he arrived there. He was in high spirits, which even the little contre-temps which had just happened could not damp for more than a minute or two; and he gladly availed himself of the opening, which the elder lady requesting him to lend her his Bradshaw made, to enter into conversation. This was at first supported almost entirely by the mother and himself, but little by little the daughter joined in, and before the train had left London Bridge a quarter of an hour, Rupert Holmes had changed his seat from one opposite the ladies, and was chatting away as familiarly as if he had known his fellow passengers for years.

Presently the elderly lady took out from her traveling bag some knitting, at which she began placidly to work; and as the pattern upon which she was engaged was a somewhat complicated one, requiring much attention and counting of stitches, she gradually fell out of the conversation, which, however was carried on more or less vigorously by the others.

Rupert Holmes was far too busy a man to go much into society. His evening relaxation consisted in a visit to a quiet literary club to which he belonged, and a talk over the last new books, the latest art gossip, or the pending political question.—To him, therefore, the conversation, with a lively, clever and undeniable pretty woman, was a real pleasure. As the train slackened for Reigate he had no longer the slightest idea of changing carriages. As it stopped, however, the young lady said, with a suppressed look of arch amusement, "Here you leave us, I believe?"

"I! no indeed!" he said hastily; "I am going on to Chichester. What made you think so?"

"You certainly intended to change—you cannot but own that?"

Rupert Holmes colored.

"I do not know, unless you are a conjurer, how you could guess a half-formed intention."

"I did not guess at all; I was sure of it. When we got in, you were just agoing to smoke, and you scowled in a most ungracious way."

"O, indeed!" Rupert put in depreciatingly.

"Yes indeed, most ungraciously; and you put your cigar case in your pocket in a pet; and you took out your Bradshaw, and ran your finger down to the first stopping place, and then laid it aside, with a determined air, as much as to say, 'Well, I must put up with it for three-quarters of an hour, and then out I go. The whole thing was as plain as if you had said it aloud."

Rupert laughed.

"It is no use denying the impeachment," he said; "I must really apologize for having been so rude as to let you see you were unwelcome. My only excuse is, that I saw that the new comers were ladies, but I did not notice more than that; and I can plead in further extenuation, that I have seen the error of my ways, and have given up all idea of changing my carriage."

"I am sure, mamma, we must feel touched at the compliment of being preferred to a cigar; that is indeed a concession for a gentleman to make."

"You are really too severe upon me," Rupert laughed. "Ladies' society is, of course, preferable to a cigar. But one does not generally get ladies' society in a railway carriage. One gets the ladies, but not their society. It is because ladies don't give us their society, because it is rare that one can exchange a word with them, still more rarely engage in conversation, that we take to our cigars. I would rather talk than smoke; but I would rather enjoy a cigar than the silent contemplation of ladies' attire."

"I think your defence is a fair one," the elder said. "For my own part I cannot see why, in a first class carriage, one should not enter into conversation with a gentleman—I mean, of course, when a lady has reached my time of life. Naturally much depends upon the appearance and manner of the gentleman; but supposing no objection to arise upon this score, I cannot see why we should not speak. Upon board ship, for example, during a long voyage, every one becomes friendly and intimate without the necessity of an introduction. When I was young I made a voyage to India, and some of the friendships I formed on my way out and home were among the most valued and lasting I ever made. We shall be companions for the whole length of our journey, for we are going to Chichester."

Rupert Holmes, after expressing his satisfaction at hearing they were to travel so far together, volunteered the information that he was going to stay with his friends, the Wilmots. As he mentioned the name, he fancied he detected a slight glance of satisfaction upon the part of the young lady and found from her mother that the Wilmots were intimate friends of her own. This served as a sort of introduction, and the rest of the journey was spent in a lively conversation, in which the theatres, exhibitions, society and manners, all served as subjects for much skirmishing between Rupert and his young companion, the elder lady taking but little part, and occasionally dropping into a short doze. Never did a journey seem so short to Rupert Holmes; and he was really sorry when the train slackened its speed for the Chichester station. However, he was consoled by the hope that he should soon meet his pretty fellow passenger, for Jack Wilmot had spoken of sundry croquet meetings as coming off, and at these he felt sure he should meet her. As the train drew up, he asked if he could be of any service; but the elder lady said that her servant would be there to meet her. Jack Wilmot was upon the platform; and after shaking hands with Rupert helped to assist the ladies out, shaking hands with them, and addressing them as Mrs. and Miss Turner, and adding to Rupert's great pleasure, as he said good-by, "We shall see you tomorrow, I hope, Mrs. Turner?"

The reply was affirmative. Mrs. Turner nodded in a friendly way to Rupert. "We shall meet tomorrow, you see; good-by." Miss Turner made a very demure little bend in answer to Rupert's bow; and in another minute he was hurried off with his luggage to Wilmot's dog cart, which was waiting outside the station.

"So, Master Rupert, you have been getting up a flirtation on your way down, eh! She is a very pretty girl, as you can see for yourself, and a clever one, too; so mind what you are after, for I fancy she is a bit of a flirt."

"Who are they, Jack?"

"The old lady is the widow of an Indian banker who died long ago, and left her very well off. She came from this part of the country, I believe; so she returned and bought a small place about a mile out of town."

Rupert did not pursue the subject. It was quite enough for him to know that he was to meet Amy Turner—he had heard the mother use the Christian name—next day.

At lunch, on Jack's mentioning that Rupert had come down with the Turners, he found that Amy was the bosom friend of Miss Wilmot, and that she was the dearest girl in the world; a conclusion with which Rupert was rather inclined to agree. The next day there was a large croquet party at the Elms, and Mr Holmes was introduced in due form to Mrs. Turner and her daughter. The former lady was very cordial in her reception; the latter, to Rupert's amazement, was exceedingly demure and distant, and appeared disposed altogether to ignore their acquaintance of the preceding day. There was no opportunity for conversation at the present moment, as Miss Wilmot came up and hurried Miss Turner and Rupert off to a game which was upon the point of commencing, and where two players were required. Here they were chosen upon opposite sides; principally, Rupert thought, by a little manœuvring upon the part of the young lady. The game once fairly commenced, he was enabled to speak to her.

"So our journey of yesterday is to be ignored, Miss Turner?"

"How ignored, Mr. Holmes?"

"I don't know; I'm desirous of doing what is right and proper, and I am endeavoring to take my cue from you."

"What nonsense, Mr. Holmes! What did you expect me to do?—to rush forward with both hands extended, and express my delight at meeting you again."

Rupert laughed.

"No Miss Turner, hardly that. But I did not expect you to treat me as an utter stranger."

"Not as a stranger; but still there is a difference; you see—There, it is your turn to play."

"What difference, Miss Turner?" Rupert asked, as he came back to her side again.

"Dear me!" the girl said half pettishly; "one would think it was an unwilling witness you were cross-examining, Mr. Holmes. A good deal of difference—all the difference in the world. Before, you were a stranger; I might see you again. Mamma was there to do proprieties; and of course I was able to laugh and talk with you as I chose. Don't you think it is a well known fact, that people always do get much more intimate—well, yes, flirt more, if you like—away from home than we do in our own neighborhood? When people are never going to meet again of course they need not be so still and particular as at other times. I have been angry with myself ever since for having talked so much. Yes you may smile, Mr. Holmes, but I really have."

The girl was so evidently in earnest that Rupert forebode to point out the weak part of her defence—the fact that she had found out at Reigate that he was going to stay with the Wilmots—and only said quietly:

"I see what you mean, Miss Turner. Yes, I suppose there is some sort of difference; but I do not see why you should be angry with yourself. We certainly talked a good deal—that is, I talked a good deal; but our conversation could not, even by the most ill-natured, be called a flirtation, and your mamma was by your side. To me it was the most pleasant journey I ever made."

"Yes, it was a very pleasant journey," she said frankly; "and we knew, you see, who you were; that is, that you were going to stay here, which served as a sort of introduction."

Rupert could not resist a slight smile at this bold attempt at self justification, which entirely contradicted the former plea set up, and Miss Turner, at once reading his thoughts, colored slightly, and said:

"Here, Mr. Holmes, it's your turn again; they are looking quite cross at us for not attending. We really must pay attention to the game."

From this period the girl gave Rupert no opportunities of renewing the conversation, but entered con amore into the game, cro-

NEWPORT DAILY NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, March 27, 1872.

In the United States Senate yesterday the tariff bill was debated throughout the session. The free list in the Senate bill was adopted as a substitute for an amendment offered. In the House the bill authorizing the site for the depot of the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad Company in Washington came up, and the question being regarded as a contest between the Pennsylvania Central and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad companies the whole day was spent in filibustering without accomplishing anything.

The city authorities of Boston are considering the propriety of widening School street. If this is done, the statue of Franklin which now stands in front of the new City Hall will have to be moved.—This the Transcript thinks is a hard fate, which it bewails in behalf of "Poor old Benjamin Franklin" in the following language: "If he is to be again disturbed by the widening of School street, what will he think of his restless progeny? It is not twenty years since he was first lifted upon his pedestal.—But the old City Hall disappeared, and the printer-statesman was moved some rods to the west in the reconstruction, where he has since remained, looking wistfully into Parker's dining room window, and recalling the the time when he wandered about with a penny roll under his arm, and needed a hot dinner much more than in his present status. "Where next?" must be a puzzle even to an old philosopher; but there he stands, hat and cane in hand, ready to move onward. With him, in life, there were no footsteps backwards.

Money in Elections.

In discussing the policy of using money for elections, the Hartford Courant, General Hawley's paper, says that in only one canvass in Connecticut have the Republicans expended $20,000. When General Hawley ran for Governor, in 1866, the total expenditure was $5,000; in 1867 it was $4,000. The Hartford Post presumes that this statement is correct, and that the amount of money spent by the Republicans—perhaps by both parties—has been exaggerated. It has no idea that the Republicans of Connecticut have ever in any one year spent anything like the amount used by that party in New Hampshire, in the recent canvass. But, the Post adds, "there's something to be read between the lines of the above facts, to wit: That since General Hawley was defeated no Republican convention has ever entertained the thought of nominating a candidate who had not large wealth to draw upon for the expenses of a campaign. We do not speak particularly of Governor Jewell; but the fact is, no poor man, or man of moderate means, is eligible today for the office of Governor of Connecticut. That's the mischief of this business."

March.

The proverb "mad as a March hare" is fully justified by the furious character of the airs that have been blowing lately; quicksilver thermometers have lost their mercurial disposition, and are found wanting in the scale of fair in-height; and the alcoholic ones have fallen to very low spirits. School boys who have attempted the usual Franklinian pastimes of the season are sore-throated to such a degree that instead of raising a kite they can only raise a hawk; and the bucolics generally are troubled with wind to an extent defying the resources of Galen. Garden beds haven't a sign of a spring about them, and are covered only with sheets of ice. Altogether, although we have often before had weather at this time of year with which we are inclined to quarrel, we never remember a month so ready to come to hard blows, and if all our vernal equinoxes are to be like this we could forgive our bitterest enemy for "stealing a March," conditionally that his might should favor our May.—New York World.

Care of Horses.

A celebrated writer says: "All horses must not be fed in the same proportions, without regard to their ages, their constitutions and their work, because the impropriety of such a practice is self-evident. Yet it is constantly done, and is the basis of diseases of every kind.

Never use bad hay on account of its cheapness, because there is not proper nourishment in it.

Damaged corn is exceedingly injurious, because it brings on inflammation of the bowels and skin diseases.

Chaff is better for old horses than hay, because they can chew and digest it better.

Mix chaff with corn or beans, and do not give the latter alone, because it will make the horse chew his food more, and digest it better.

Hay or grass alone will not support a horse under hard word, because there is not sufficient nutritive body in either.

When a horse is not worked hard its food should chiefly be hay, because oats supply more nourishment and flesh-making material than any other kind of food; hay not so much.

As a rule, the curry comb is used too much and the brush too little. When a horse is brought into the stable covered with sweat and mud, he should be rubbed dry with straw; the next morning, with a curry comb in one hand and a good brush in the other, he can be thoroughly cleaned—the curry comb only being used to straighten the hairs ahead of the brush. The difficulty about getting a good curry combing arises from the neglect to rub the horse clean with straw before leaving him for the night. Much care should be used in cleaning a horse's legs with a curry comb, so as not to injure the joints.

Enoch Arden returned to Wilmington, N. C., recently, after an absence of years, and found that Mrs. Arden had executed the regular programme of becoming Mrs. Philip Ray, and that there was moreover quite an array of little Rays. But as Enoch had not fooled away his time on any desert island but with a strict eye to business, had accumulated about $60,000, the little ceremony of his funeral was dispensed with. Philip Ray was persuaded to emigrate, and Mr. and Mrs. Arden are now "at home" to visitors.

A Cheyenne reporter thus describes a dress worn at a party there: "Miss H. wore a polonaise made of blue jeans, postillioned in the back, cut via-a-vis with a de trop bias, and gored in the most sanguinary manner."

WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Editors.

WASHINGTON, March 22.

There was a gathering at the House of Speaker Blaine, last Saturday evening, as could have been collected in no other city in the country. It was the annual reception which the Speaker gives to his fellow-craftsmen of the press. There is a goodly company of journalists in Washington, both in and out of Congress. In the first place, there was the host, the noblest Roman of them all, who pushed himself into prosperity and reputation by hard work upon the Portland Advertiser and the Kennebec Journal. They say that Blaine was as model an editor as he is a model Speaker. When his country gets through with his services, if that time ever comes, he will go back to the profession which spared him reluctantly.—Vice President Colfax is also an outgrowth of the newspaper, and was full of reminiscences, the other night of type setting and leader-writing days. The presiding officers of both Houses of Congress do not often come from the same walks of professional life.—There could be no better evidence of the power which journalism has become in this country, than the second and third highest officers of the government are of that guild.

EDITORS IN THE SENATE.

There are but few journalists in the Senate but there are but few college educated men there either. Senator Browlow of Tennessee, published and edited The Whig, until it was suppressed by the rebels in 1861. Senator Casserly, of California, spent his best days as a newspaper man. Carl Schurz has dabbled a little in everything, during the twenty years that he has been in this country. Only two years before he was elected to the Senate, he was a sojourner in Washington as one of the correspondents of the New York Tribune—which will perhaps help to account or the ease with which that paper reconciles itself to praising and defending him in a course, which, in its better days, it would have condemned with equal severity. Senator Anthony, of Rhode Island came fresh from college studies and honors to the charge of the Providence Journal.—He still continues to shape and control its course. Under his guidance the Journal has done as much to dignify journalism and extend the measure of its influence as any paper in New England.

EDITORS IN THE HOUSE.

Among the Representatives here are fifteen or twenty journalists. New York city chooses half its delegation from among the craft. The oldest of these eight democrats is James Brooks, who first came to Washington forty years ago, as a pioneer correspondent. The corps was then very small, there was no telegraph to act as its servant, and the people got their Washington news through round-about and tardy sources. Soon after this experience Mr. Brooks established the New York Express, and has remained its editor ever since, although much of the time he has been in Washington as the representative of the eighth district. Mr. Cox, versatile, learned, and always funny, if not always witty, has occupied himself with everything, including moving and newspaper editing. Thomas Kinsella, of the Brooklyn district, has been for many years the editor of the Eagle in that city, a position up to which he worked from the compositor's case. Hon. Thomas R. Roosevelt has not, as has been reported, just retired from the control of the New York Citizen. He has edited the paper since 1868. Hon. Ellis H. Roberts is the only republican in the New York delegation whom journalism gives to legislation.

But from the other States, Mr. Dawes, the leader of the House, besides teaching school and practicing law, had time to edit a little paper in western Massachusetts, for several years before the people of that section discovered that however good a teacher, lawyer or editor he was, his place and work in life were in the National legislature, where it is difficult to find a man at once able and honester. General Banks was of the craft for a brief space. Charles M. Willard, of Vermont, one of the growing young men in the House, is the editor of the Green Mountain Freeman, a paper so ably conducted that its influence reaches out beyond the States. Among the other newspaper men are Jasper Packard, of Indiana; Madison M. Walden and Frank W. Palmer, of Iowa; Moses K. Armstrong and Richard C McCormick, the Delegates from the Territories of Dakota and Arizona. Of the democrats, E. L. Acker, J. Lawrence Getz, H. S. Hahleman, of Pennsylvania; Philadelph Van Trump, of Ohio; A. M. Waddel, of North Carolina, and a number of others have been, or are, connected with the press. From their out look in Congress, they get few crumbs of comfort to send home to democratic subscribers' [Utica Herald.

An up-town family in New York advertises for an experienced cook, "who can dress a little boy five years old." It is said that one of Barnum's cannibals boards there.

It is computed by the Isaac Newtons of the present century that over $1500 has been paid during the past thirty years for the printing in the Congressional Globe of the single word "laughter."

ABOUT HOME.

—His Excellency, Governor Padelford, was in the city yesterday.

—Many of our business men are confined to their homes on account of sickness.

—The auction sale at No. 15 Washington square is postponed till Friday. See advertisement.

—The sale of furniture at Hartmann's saloon is postponed until Thursday, March 28, at 10 o'clock. See advertisement.

—There are rumors on the street of a new express company being formed to take the place of the defunct New York & Boston.

—Since the failure of the New York and Boston Express company, the Kinsley Express have had a largely increased business to perform.

—There will be divine service in Zion Chapel on Thursday afternoon at 3 1-2 o'clock, and on Good Friday in the church, commencing at 10 1-2 A. M.

—Schooner, "More Light" arrived at this port yesterday. She reports that she lost 20,000 laths during the recent gale. She was from Calais, Me., and bound to New York.

—All the effects of the New York and Boston Express company were carried to the New York boat last night for transportation to the latter city. Today the express office stands desolate and alone.

—A profound truth is that in the Star, which says,—speaking of the election in the First Ward,—"If Mr. Braman gets votes enough, he will doubtless be elected." It must have taken a philosopher to get that off.

—We stated modestly yesterday that we trusted the approach of spring was near. Evidently the clerk of the weather took offence at that remark for before night he showed us how vain were our surmises, and this morning all things indicated the return of winter in all its force.

—F. W. Sprague, "thus indirectly," wishes us to inform the public that he is a candidate for Representative to the next General Assembly. He puts himself in this position, believing that without his aid the old ship of State will go to destruction, shortly, if not sooner.

—Caution from the Boston Transcript to the Providence Journal—"The rash Providence Journal pokes fun at the Jubilee. Be careful, neighbor, or you'll wake up some fine morning to find that the irrepressible Gilmore has contracted to put the whole State of Rhode Island into a corner of the Coliseum." Where are you now?

—The order of young Samaritans in this city seems to be making improvements of late. Not content with a new reading room, well stocked with papers and periodicals, they have now procured a piano for their room. Their next need is a good library and we are assured that all money or books contributed towards that object will be gratefully received by the society.

FIRESIDE READING is the title of a small volume published by A. S. Anthony & Co., New Bedford, Mass. and devoted to general advertising. It is circulated gratuitously in the cities and towns in Southern Massachusetts and Rhode Island, and contains besides the advertisements, much which will be of interest to the reader.

ACCIDENT AT THE BOILER WORKS.—Yesterday afternoon, a young man by the name of Wm. McCalvara, at work in the machine shop connected with the Boiler works, had his hand caught by a circular saw and all of the fingers severed close to the hand. Dr. Mott dressed the wound, and he went to Fall River, his home, on the three o'clock train.

REMOVAL.—The business of the Kinsley Express Company having largely increased, and the Western Union Telegraph Company being also in need of more room, the latter company will remove, about the first of April, into more commodious quarters, and the express will take the room now occupied by the Western Union. It is not yet decided where the telegraph company will locate, but it is thought now that they will go into Young's Block. They have also several other places in view.

PETITIONS IN CONGRESS.—Mr. Pendleton presented in the House of Representatives, at Washington yesterday, the petition of citizens of this city asking for the establishment of a lighthouse on the southeasterly part of Block Island; referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. Eames presented a petition of citizens of Pawtucket for an appropriation for the purchase of a centrally located site and the erection thereon of a building for a post office; referred to the committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

INSANE.—Thomas Swift, a young man who has in times past kept a peanut stand in various parts of the town, manifested unmistakable symptoms of insanity, at his boarding place last night, and was accordingly arrested and taken to the station house to prevent his doing any mischief. When arrested he was found on top of the house, engaged in tinkering the telegraph wires.—He has been in town for some years, coming here from Lawrence, Mass., and has been in poor health for some time past. He will probably be taken to the Butler Hospital for the Insane.

CONCERT AT THE OPERA HOUSE.—The entertainment given last evening by the Band from the Institution for the Blind, South Boston, far surpassed our expectations. Master Yars and Miss Brownell did themselves great credit. Master Baker in his flute solo was twice encored by the audience, an evidence of their appreciation of his merits. The instrumental music was excellent and would have done credit to older heads and brighter eyes. As a whole the concert was a success, and the one for whose benefit it was given must have realized a handsome sum, for the house, both below and in the gallery, was filled to overflowing.

Narragansett Pier.

Nine strikers from the Westerly quarry, arrived at Kingston last Friday evening under command of Sheriff Berry, and were lodged in the jail to await trial. Damages are placed in the writ at $50,000.

Dutch Island.

Last Thursday, Edward Cobb, Fort Keeper for the United States Engineer Department, on this Island, and John Hardin, boatman of the same department, found themselves on Connanicut with a strong desire to get back to their homes here. They left here the day before in a row-boat, and had been to Newport on business. Upon reaching the West Ferry they found the Narragansett Ferry Boat had just arrived, having been delayed at this island, the previous night, by the gale. The ice was now making very fast, and the wind west and blowing heavy, and Mr. Cobb concluded 'twere better to come by the ferry boat than by the row boat. There were on the boat, when it started, Frank Gould, the boatman, Michael Watson of the Engineer Department, who had gone from here to assist Mr. Gould on the trip, and Messrs. Cobb and Benton. They had got about one hundred yards from the wharf when they were stopped by the thickness of the slush ice. The boat was given all sail and got quite a distance, but the wind was so heavy she made leeway, and soon ran aground and defied all attempts of the crew to get her afloat. Samuel Cobb, of the Engineer Department made an unsuccessful attempt to go to their assistance from the Island, with the light keeper's boat. The remainder of the employes on the Island made three attempts to launch one of the surf boats belonging to the Engineer Department, but were obliged to give it up after getting thoroughly wet. But relief finally came. Captain Pardon Barber and his mate, of schooner Ontario, took their boat, proceeded to schooner John Manlove, took on board Capt. Garlick of that schooner and his mate, with lines, &c., and after two hours hard labor managed to get to the grounded ferry boat and rescue the passengers. The ice was setting very fast, and they had to work out of it stern foremost, for a couple of hundred yards, but they finally succeeded in landing the rescued ones safely on the Island.

The Providence Conference.

The Providence Conference closed its session yesterday and the following are some of the principal appointments. We have not room for them all. It will be seen that Rev. Mr. Leavitt remains with the First Church in this city, and that Rev. E. D. Jones, last year at North Dighton, is in charge of the Thames congregation. Rev. Mr. Chase is left without an appointment at his own request, that he may accept the agency of the Peace Society. He will continue his residence in this city. It will be observed that changes are made in the pastorate at Middletown, Portsmouth and Little Compton.

Literary Notices.

OLIVER OPTIC'S MAGAZINE for April, "fresh bright and sparkling" as April rain drops, is in the hands of subscribers and on the counters of the newsdealers and booksellers. It contains as usual a splendid table of contents. Oliver Optic, Lucy Kelton and Mrs. E. D. Cheney are there which is praise enough of its value. Lee & Shepard, 149 Washington street, Boston, Mass.

IN THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for April, we find an abundance of that which is pleasant to read and good to remember. For instance sketches and portraits of W. H. Aspinwall, the eminent merchant; Robert S. Candlish, D. D., successor of Dr. Chalmer's of Edinburgh; the Engineers of the Mt. Cenis Tunnel; besides admirable articles on many other subjects.

ARTHUR'S FOR APRIL we can commend as being a valuable number. Its stories are of interest, its poetry fine, and its fashions such as will delight the heart of every lady; T. S. Arthur & Son, Philadelphia.

THE LADY'S FRIEND is another excellent magazine for the household. Its publishers have made it typographically, a model of elegance and beauty, while its contents are constantly improving. The present number is unrivalled in the history of ladies' magazines. Deacon & Peterson, Philadelphia.

THE AMERICAN EDUCATIONAL MONTHLY for April is before us. It contains as usual a long list of short and pithy articles, all pertaining more or less closely to the cause of education. It opens with "Education in Japan," a singularly interesting account of the progress of learning among this peculiar people. After which comes, "The Sons of Pestolizzi," "Use and Abuse of the Adjective," "Female Education" &c., &c., J. W. Schermerhorn & Co., New York.

THE AMERICAN STOCK JOURNAL.—We wish to call the attention of our readers to this journal. Each number is handsomely illustrated with Engravings, and contains many articles of interest to every Farmer and Stock Raiser; only $1.00 a year. Specimen copies free. Address N. P. Boyer & Co., Parkesburg, Chester County, Pa.

THE STUDENT AND SCHOOLMATE is a magazine which our youthful readers will appreciate. Horatio Alger jr., writes for this magazine and in the present number we have a continuation of his interesting story, "Slow and sure," or "From the street to the Shop." There are a host of other good things to be found here, but we will leave our readers to find them

What Spring Brings With It.

Regarded from a medical standpoint, Spring is not the delectable season described by vernal poets. On the contrary, its yield of intermittent fevers, bilious attacks, rheumatic pains, disorders of the stomach, nervous complaints, and pulmonary diseases, is almost as large as its crop of violets, snowdrops and cherry blossoms. The invisible seeds of innumerable maladies rise with the morning mists, and are scattered broadcast by the vapors of night. Who can resist their mephitic influence? Certainly not the weak by nature, or those whose nervous energies have been overtasked by mental or physical labor, unless they tone and invigorate their systems, and thus enable them to cope with the unhealthy influences by which they are surrounded.

The only medicinal agent by which this object can be rapidly and safely accomplished, is the great vegetable renovant and invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The operation of this celebrated specific is four-fold. It strengthens the digestive organs, regulates the secretions, improves the condition of the blood, superinduces a regular habit of body, and thereby imparts such vigor and elasticity to the whole physical structure, as to render it capable of resisting the action of the poisonous miasma, with which the spring atmosphere is always to some extent impregnated. Here, then, is a ready and certain means of escaping the disorders prevalent at this season, or (if they have already fastened upon the system) of conquering them speedily and thoroughly. The flavor of a medicine is not of much consequence, provided it does its work properly, but of Hostetter's Bitters it may be fairly said, that they effect a cure without outraging the patient's sense of taste.

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11, 1868.

W. K. REYNOLDS—Dear Sir: This is to certify that my wife was afflicted with a weak back, attended with intense pains after any exercise, for fifteen years, and after trying numerous preparations recommended for such complaints, without relief, I procured a bottle of Bartone's Lotion. I applied it as directed, and received a permanent cure, as it is nearly two years since she has had any return of it. Her sister was also troubled with a weak side for two years, and found no relief until applying Bartone's Lotion. I have also used it as a family medicine—internal and external—for Rheumatism, Dysentery, Burns, Cuts, etc., and can cheerfully say that it is the best preparation for what it is recommended, and advise no firmly to be without it.

Sixteen Years of Success.—In 1856 the now famous MUSTANG LINIMENT was first made known to the public by an extensive system of advertising. From that time to the present, the demand for it has been steadily increasing until it has taken the lead of all embrocations, lotions, ointments, and other external remedies, imported or domestic, ever introduced into the American market. In the most celebrated racing and trotting stables, in the establishments of stage and city car companies, and in the stables of private gentlemen, it is the only recognized cure for such diseases of the horse as require outward treatment. Nor is it less valuable as a local application for some of the most distressing complaints to which man is subject.—Rheumatism, stiffness of the joints, neuralgia, sore throat, tumors, warts, earache, toothache, yield to its pain-subduing, counter-irritant properties, and burns, scalds and cuts are healed with incredible rapidity under its operation.

Beauty's Best Auxiliary.—Ask the belle of the season what appointment of her toilet-table holds the highest place in her esteem, and she will reply, without a moment's reflection, HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM. Nothing, she is thoroughly aware, contributes so powerfully to enhance her charms and render her irresistible as this most delightful and healthy auxiliary of Beauty. By using it ladies are enabled, long after they have passed the meridian of life, to preserve the youthful bloom and purity of their complexions, and where Nature has denied that superlative attraction, the Balm fully compensates for her deficiencies. ma16-m&j

A COUGH, COLD, OR SORE THROAT requires immediate attention, as neglect oftentimes results in some incurable lung disease. "Miller's Vegetable Expectorant" is a simple remedy, and will almost invariably give immediate relief. Sold by all dealers in medicine at 25 cts. per bottle.

TELEGRAMS.

FROM WASHINGTON.

March 26 1872.

The Tea and Coffee.

It is probable that the entire Senate Tariff bill may be agreed to with the exception of the duties on tea and coffee, which can hardly be imposed after both Houses have by decided votes abolished them. Meanwhile the trade in tea and coffee is paralyzed and dealers are appealing to Congress to take some immediate action. The trade distribution of coffee in February, 1872, was only four thousand five hundred and fifty-five tons against sixteen thousand nine hundred and sixty-seven tons in February, 1871.

Mr. Sumner on the Sale of Arms.

Senator Sumner appeared before the committee. He refused to testify and asked leave to read a protest, which the committee granted. Mr. Sumner then read the protest.

The Whole Story in Regard to the Sale of Arms.

Senator Patterson's frank testimony today revealed the whole story. Chamberlain wanted evidence to aid his friend Place, since convicted in a French court of dishonest transactions in the sale of arms, and he tried to use his American friends to pull his chestnuts out of the fire. When the matter was first industriously circulated, it was estimated that American officials named had pocketed over a million of dollars by the sales of arms. Nothing of this kind has been developed thus far, and Mr. Schurz takes refuge behind musty precepts of European international law, while Mr. Sumner quotes from parliamentary proceedings in the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

For Internal Use,

Bartone's Lotion should be taken in half or one teaspoonful doses, in a half cup of hot water, well sweetened; and a dose should always be taken before applying externally, to keep pain from the stomach. end-d

CARPETS,

OIL CLOTHS,

AND MATTING.

The subscriber has received, and offers for sale, a fresh stock of Carpets in good variety.

Having been fortunate in buying before the recent rise in price, he is able and willing to sell at as low prices as can be found in the lowest markets

The high price and scarcity of wool makes it probable that prices will advance with the season, and he therefore recommends all needing Carpets this year to buy early, for they will certainly be no lower in price, and most probably will be higher.

Carpets made and laid at fair prices.

Particular attention paid to hanging shades using for such work, a highly approved fixture.

All wanting Carpets, are invited to inspect the stock, which will be freely shown, leaving them free to purchase or not as they may decide.

The Celebrated Quaker Bitters—A Great Spring Medicine.

Why do many people in the Spring of the year feel weary, weak, languor of body and mind, which if not removed, often results in dangerous maladies, a morbid sensation, &c.

It is because nature at this season of the year is undergoing a great change. She commences to germinate, to generate, to propogate, to build, to renovate; this great law is palpable in all the animal creation, hence the necessity of a counter action.

The aged are more susceptible of nature's changes than the young, because the power of repelling disease is not so great, consequently requiring more vigilance.

Those past the meridian of life, at all seasons of the year, are greatly benefitted by taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters. It produces new life, energy, and consequently happiness.

Farm Implements, Lawn Mowers,

Cucumber Pumps, Fertilizers, &c.

THE subscriber would inform his patrons that he is ready at the OLD STAND on Commercial Wharf to answer their need. A competent machinist will give attention to the repair of all kinds of Mowing Machines, Lawn Machines, and general jobbing. The Steel Plow is leading. The Long-framed Cultivator is superior. The Clipper Mowers, Hay State Rake, the Fodder Horse Hay-fork and Hay-conveyor, are the best helpers in hay ing.

The Wilson's, Bradley's, Davis's, Upton's, Middleton's, or any other brand of Fertilizer supplied at wholesale or retail.

The Cucumber Wood Pump is unrivaled for cheapness, durability and capacity.

We can now supply the long desired Horizontal Attachment to take well-water indoors for family use, all through wood, and no metallic tank.

Please not delay your repairing until you need the machinery. Please call and consult our catalogues for articles not named: Allan's, of N. NEXT NUMBER, APRIL 1st.

THE REAL ESTATE RECORD,

Published Monthly.

PRICE.....$1.00 a Year.

The "Record" is not a mere advertising medium, nor the exclusive organ of any agent or broker, but a live, enterprising paper, devoted to Real Estate and financial interests generally. Its circulation is chiefly among the wealthy classes, who make Newport their summer home, and advertisements inserted in its columns necessarily reach the very best and most desirable classes. A limited space only is given to this department. Cards of Builders, Contractors, Brokers, &c., occupying one inch space, will be inserted for $20 a year. Ordinary Advertisements, twenty cents a line, for each insertion. No charge less than $2.

As the "Record" is sent by mail, postage prepaid, to the summer residents of Newport, and other popular resorts, when at their city homes, and to a large number of others of the same class, it is evident that it reaches a greater proportion of wealthy families than any other paper in the country. Advertisements designed for the next issue, April 1st, must be forwarded at once.

Assignee's Sale of Valuable Hotel Property
At Narragansett Pier, on WEDNESDAY, April 10th, 1872, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

The splendid hotel property known as the Delevan House, consisting of about 1 3 4 acres of land, a large three-story wooden hotel 90x31 feet, with L and wash house attached; also a cottage house adjoining the hotel, which may be rented or used in connection with the same, being same as conveyed to D. T. Briggs by deeds recorded in the Records of Land Evidence in South Kingstown, in book No. 2, pages 172 and 173, 259 and 260, 263 and 264, 440 and 441.

The above real estate, together with the building, will be sold in one parcel, free from all incumbrances.

The hotel and cottage will accommodate about one hundred and fifty guests, and constitutes one of the most desirable hotel estates at this celebrated summer resort. The location is desirable in relation to the beach, and ocean view; also the proposed Narragansett Valley Railroad, which will probably be built within a year.

Two large bathing houses on the beach will be sold at same time; also all the furniture in hotel and cottage, consisting of chamber sets, mattresses, spring beds, bedding, parlor furniture, carpets, crockery, &c., &c. For particulars inquire of Assignees.

questing him, he thought, with extra spite, over and over again, finally winning the game for her side most triumphantly. After this she said she would not play any more at present, and Rupert giving up his mallet, volunteered to assist her to find Mrs. Turner, a pursuit, however, which was not carried on long, for in a few minutes they took a seat and looked on at the other players.

That evening Rupert came to the conclusion that Amy Turner was the nicest girl he had ever met, and that this time he was really seriously in for it. The croquet party was acknowledged to be a great success; and as in the country, the people generally contrive to compress their years' amusements into the very smallest space, a constant succession of croquet and archery meetings and picnics followed, and Rupert met Amy Turner nearly every day. By the end of a fortnight he was thoroughly convinced of the justice of the conclusion he had formed, and was resolved that he would take the earliest possible opportunity of bringing matters to a crisis. He thought, he felt almost sure, that she cared for him; she was more quiet and shy now than she had been at first, and her color went and came when he talked to her. Yes, he felt sure that she loved him.

At the end of a fortnight a great ball was to be given in the neighborhood, and he hoped that he should then find an opportunity. The room was full that evening before the Turners arrived, and Rupert had just stood up for a quadrille, and was unable to go near Amy for some little time. He observed that a plain quiet looking man of three or four and forty years old at once went up to her, took her from Mrs. Turner's arm, and stood up with her in the quadrille. While the dance went on they talked together, earnestly and confidentially, and when it was over continued walking round the room. As soon as Rupert could get free he went up to her and found that her card was already full for the next five or six dances. He put down his name and retired after a few words, and Amy continued promenading with her partner. Rupert took up his place at the door way, around which several men were standing, talking. It seemed that they were watching Amy and her partner, for Rupert heard her name mentioned.

"It is quite true," one said; "though it is hard to believe. The idea of pretty Miss Turner marrying Gaisford seems too absurd; but there's no doubt about it. I heard him mention it himself."

"There is nothing very wonderful about it," another said. "The usual rule—beauty against gold. She is an arrant flirt. But it is quite true. Gaisford's sister, Mrs. Standish told me. It seems it was arranged at Cheltenham three months ago. The Turners were stopping with an uncle or something there, and Gaisford happened to be there too, and of course they came together, and the matter was soon settled. It was not to be mentioned to a soul, because Gaisford had only been a widower nine months. So he stayed away until the year was up. There is no secret about it now, and they are to be married next month."

Rupert Holmes stood very quiet and still as he heard the news. He could not doubt it, and yet he could scarcely believe it. It was some time before he recovered, and he felt that he was so pale that it would not be noticed. A waltz had begun now; Amy stood talking to her last partner. He moved quietly round and took up his position behind them, and presently heard Mr. Gaisford call her by her Christian name. Then Rupert Holmes turned and went out through the French window behind into the garden. He knew now, if he had ever doubted before, how passionately he loved this woman who had fooled and betrayed him.

It was not until, by the cessation of the music, he knew that supper had begun, that he felt calm enough to go indoors.—Of one thing he was determined: Amy Turner should outwardly have no triumph over him. He would let her think that he had been flirting with her as heartlessly as she had with him, and that it was a drawn game at the best. With this resolution he went into the supper-room, but could not bring himself to approach where she was sitting, for Gaisford was standing behind her chair. It was not until dancing recommenced that he had an opportunity of approaching her. She was for a moment alone, and Rupert noticed that as she saw he was coming up to her, a shade of coolness came across her face.

"I must apologise for missing my dance, Miss Turner; but I could not find you."

It is of no consequence, Mr. Holmes," she said, "I danced with Mr. Gaisford."

"Then I am relieved of a burden of self reproach," he said lightly. "By the way, Miss Turner, is there any commission I can execute for you upon the Continent? I start tomorrow; and anything, from a Venetian chain to a swiss alpenstock, that you may require, I shall be happy to charge myself with."

Rupert saw that the color left her face, and her lips quivered a little; but she said steadily:

"Thank you, Mr. Holmes; I do not think I will trouble you. I wish you a pleasant journey."

And then she arose, took the arm of a gentleman who claimed her for the dance, and was off.

"Where have you been, Robert? I have missed you all the evening," his friend Wilmot asked, coming up.

"I have a badish headache, and have been strolling in the grounds, Jack."

When the carriage came, Rupert took his seat on the box, under plea of the headache, and on reaching the house went straight up to bed. He felt that he could not stand the commiseration of his friend, who, he knew, had guessed pretty accurately the state of his feelings. Upon getting up to his room, he packed his things, and wrote a note to Jack:

"MY DEAR JACK: I am sorry to say I must go up to town tomorrow on particular business. You understand me, of course. Make things square with your mother and sister."

And in the morning, before the family were down, he was in the train, and on his way to New Haven, whence he crossed that evening to Havre.

For three months Rupert Holmes traveled upon the Continent. The vacation was over, and he ought to have been back to his chambers; but he had no heart for it. In fact, he was very hard hit indeed, and had resolved to throw over the Bar for a year at any rate, if not forever, and go to India for the winter. He was in Switzerland now and was traveling by train from Zurich to Lucerne, whence he meant to cross over the St. Gothard and go via Trieste to Alexandria.

He was alone in a railway carriage, when at one of the stations the door opened, and two ladies and a gentleman entered. It was not until they were seated, and the train was in motion again, that he looked up from his book, and he could hardly restrain a sharp exclamation when he saw that his vis a vis was Amy Turner—at least, Amy Turner no longer, for next to her was seated Mr. Gaisford. The recognition was mutual. A bright flush flew over her cheek, and fading away left her very pale. Then she quietly held out her hand, and said:

"This is indeed an unexpected meeting, Mr. Holmes, but we heard from the Wilmots that you were abroad. Mr. Gaisford, Mr. Holmes. Carrie, you have heard mamma speak of Mr. Holmes—my sister."

Rupert bowed, he had recovered himself now, and addressed himself to Miss Turner.

"I was not fortunate enough to meet you when I was down at Chichester; but I so frequently heard your name mentioned to Mrs. Turner, that I feel quite like an old acquaintance. Mr. Gaisford I met at the ball at Mr. Dingsford's, but had not the honor of an introduction."

Miss Turner said a few words; and then Mr. Gaisford, with the usual heartiness of an Englishman meeting any one with whom he had the smallest acquaintance abroad, entered into a warm conversation with him. His wife took no part in it, but sat looking out of the window, and Rupert fancied that she was thinner and paler than when he saw her last.

"No wonder," he said to himself, "tied to such a common place brute as this; I am glad of it; serves her right."

Miss Turner was of an entirely different style from her sister; prettier a good deal, as far as prettiness went; indeed, she was almost beautiful; but her face entirely lacked the intellectual expression which was characteristic of Mrs. Gaisford. Rupert wondered at two sisters being so little alike. He remembered having heard Amy speak of her sister who was away on a visit; but he had not heard of her from the Wilmots, and fancied that she was not a favorite with them.

After a time, Mr. Gaisford asked him which hotel he was going to, and on hearing his answer said:

"Very well we may as well go there too, we were thinking of the English one; but it is all the same; and as you are an old traveler, no doubt you know which is best.

Rupert was extremely vexed, but had no excuse to give for making any change. Mrs. Gaisford made a movement, as if to turn to her husband to make an objection; but she did not do so, and remained looking out of the window. She certainly, Rupert thought, had grown harder and colder than before. When the train stopped, he was the first to alight, and helped the ladies with their shawls. As he did so he could not help saying to Mrs. Gaisford:

"We are to meet, it seems, in railroad carriages. This has been rather a different ride from our last, Mrs. Gaisford."

She had grown paler again, as he spoke, with a cold, haughty look upon her face; but as he finished she gave a little start, and then the color came in a rush to her cheeks. In another moment her husband joined her, and they parted, not to meet again till the table d'hote dinner at the hotel. Rupert Holmes had thought of leaving at once; but then he told himself that she would look upon it as another triumph, and he resolved to remain, let it cost what it would. He purposely delayed going to dinner until he saw that every one would be seated, in hopes there would be no vacant seat near the Gaisfords. In this, however, he was disappointed, as a waiter at once came up to him as he entered, and told him that a seat had been kept for him, and he felt as he sat down that perhaps, after all, it was the best place for him; for Miss Turner was sitting next beyond Mr. Gaisford, so that he could neither see Amy's face, nor was he bound to exchange any remark with her. He had plenty of topics of conversation with Mr. Gaisford, who was starting with his wife and sister-in-law next day for home.

"When do you return?" Mr. Gaisford had asked; and Rupert, glancing down, saw that Mrs. Gaisford had paused to listen to his answer.

"I am going to spend the winter abroad," he said. "I am thinking of doing India; indeed, I have a sort of half-intention of joining the Indian Bar, and settling there for good." He looked down again, and saw upon Mrs. Gaisford's face a shadowy smile, gone almost before formed, and followed by a thoughtful look. "She absolutely exults over it," he said to himself.

After dinner, Mr. Gaisford proposed a stroll by the lake, and after a short delay, while the ladies went up for their things, the party went out together. For awhile they strolled together, looking across the lake, upon which the moon was shining brightly, lighting up the dark rounded form of the Righi and the snow crowned peak beyond Altorf. Then they broke up into pairs. Mrs. Gaisford lingered behind a little, and at the time she was speaking to Rupert, he could not but stay with her.—He did not know whether he was glad or sorry. He loved her still passionately, though she was false and cruel, and had spoilt his life; he loved her as much as ever, and should do so, he felt, as long as he lived. Mr. Gaisford and Miss Turner stopped and leaned upon the railings on the low wall. Without joining them, Mrs. Gaisford did the same. Rupert could see her face now, for the moon shone clear upon it. She was very thoughtful, earnest and troubled. "How her face belies her!" he thought. "What can she be going to say?" He would not speak first, and there was a silence for a moment or two, till she began.

"You do not look well, Mr. Holmes; have you been ill?"

"A doctor would say no," he said bitterly; "and as he only examines the body he would be right. No, I have had no illness."

"And you really think about living in India?"

"Yes," he said shortly.

There was a pause again, and then she began, this time in lower tones even than before.

"I am going to ask you a strange question, Mr. Holmes. Did you first hear of my—my engagement to Mr. Gaisford that night at the ball?"

"Yes, Mrs. Gaisford, I did," Rupert said, coldly.

There was another long pause.

"And if you had not heard of it you would not have gone away so suddenly—that is, it was the knowledge of it that made you part from me as you did?"

"Yes, Mrs. Gaisford, it was so. If it is any satisfaction to you to know how thoroughly you succeeded, how entirely and wholly you gained my love, in order to throw it away, know it now from my lips. I loved you with my whole heart. I went to that ball with the intention of asking you to be my wife. I heard the news, but even though the evidence seemed unquestionable, it was not until I heard him call you Amy that I believed. I had a sharp struggle with myself, Mrs. Gaisford, and I tried hard to cheat you out of the triumph you had so thoroughly gained. I hoped that you might think that I was as heartless a flirt as yourself. Did I succeed?"

There was a slight gesture of assent.

"Then I acted well," he went on bitterly. "But I give you the triumph now; it is a little delayed, but not the less complete. I loved you with all my heart and soul; you have wrecked my happiness and spoilt my life. You have crushed out all motives for exertion. You have destroyed my faith in woman. I will not spare myself even in one syllable. Mrs. Gaisford, you shall have your due. I was so mad, that even when you had done all this to me, when you had so wrecked my life, I could not hate you. I love you now as wildly and as passionately as ever; I shall love you so till I die. Are you satisfied now?"

"Yes," she said softly; and then, without another word, she turned away from the lake on which she had looked the while he had been speaking, and joined the others.

In a minute she spoke gently to her sister, and then taking her husband's arm she said; "Let us go in now, Robert it is getting damp."

Rupert Holmes followed with Miss Turner. He did not speak, he could not have spoken for words. He knew that his companion once or twice spoke to him, but he did not catch the meaning of her words. Presently he started, for Robert Gaisford burst into a loud, hearty laugh. What could he be laughing at at? His wife could never be telling the story to him? So on he walked with a dull pain to the door of the hotel. Then there was a pause.

"Are you coming in yet?" Mr. Gaisford asked.

No, he should take another turn or two.

"Then we must say good-by, Mr. Holmes," Miss Turner said, "as your boat starts, you said, at seven o'clock. Good-by. I hope you will think better of going to India."

Mrs. Gaisford did not speak: she gave him her hand, and so they stood for a moment face to face. A wild, raging desire to take her in his arms and kiss her, even with her husband standing by, seized him; and she must have seen it, for dropping his hand hastily, she turned and ran up the steps into the hotel, followed by her sister.

Rupert Holmes stood motionless looking after her, and was only roused by a touch on the shoulder, to the remembrance that Mr. Gaisford was still beside him.

"Shall we smoke a cigar together?" he asked.

"No, no," Rupert said, putting his hands to his forehead. "Please leave me alone; I am ill; I want to be alone. Good-by."

"In a moment," Mr. Gaisford said, "but I particularly want to speak to you. In fact, I promised that I would. Let us sit down for a minute or two on the wall."

Mechanically Rupert followed him across the road, and watched him while he lit a cigar, wondering with a vague wonder what new blow was to be dealt him now.

"I find," Mr. Gaisford went on between the puffs of his cigar, "that a mistake has somehow arisen—a most ridiculous—ha! ha! a most ridiculous mistake. Of course as you are starting for India tomorrow and may be away a longish time, it doesn't, as far as I know, matter much; but I promised to tell you, and so of course I do. Confound this cigar, it won't burn! What beastly trash these Swiss cigars are to be sure! and they have the impudence to call them Havanas! Yes, I am just going to tell you. Well, you see, you have got hold of what you barristers would call a case of mistaken identity. You see you thought I married Miss Turner. So I did. But I didn't marry, and never thought of marrying the Miss Turner you thought I did. I married Carrie—Amy is Miss Turner still."

Rupert stared at him, as not understanding what he heard.

"Amy Miss Turner still!" he repeated.

"Yes, of course; dont you understand? I married Miss Turner; Amy was the youngest sister."

Rupert understood now. For a moment or two the news seemed to stun him. There was a great beating at his heart and a strange dizzy noise in his brain. Then he sprang to his feet with his face strangely flushed, turned up toward the sky, and he said: "Amy free! Thank God, thank God!" Then came the thought of what he had done of what he had said, of what he had told her he thought of her, of the taunts he had flung at her; and then he sat down and covered his face with his hands, and gave a groan as of unutterable pain. Mr. Gaisford looked on too astonished to speak. Then slowly an inkling of the truth dawned upon him; he remembered now having heard some rumor of some one—yes, his name was Holmes, now he thought of it—who was supposed to have treated Amy badly, and this was how it had come about. Presently Rupert looked up; he was quiet now, but pale as death.

"Will you do me a favor?" he asked.

"Certainly," Mr. Gaisford said, "willingly."

"Will you go to Miss Turner and say that you have told me? Will you say these words? That I know how mad I have been; that no thoughts she can have of me are one tithe so bitter and contemptuous as those I have of myself; that I do not plead for forgiveness, for I do not deserve it. I know that I have forfeited all hopes of it. Still if in pity for my great sin, if in pity for the life that will be wretched without her, she can yet find it in her heart to forgive me, will she come out into the balcony of the hotel, it is empty now, and the lights in the drawing room are turned low. If she does not come, I shall know that, though she will pity, She cannot forgive—that the offence has been too great. In that case, please give her my farewell, and say that I shall never blame her that she cannot forgive me, and that I shall always pray for her happiness. Tell her that my life will not be so hard to bear as I had thought; that I shall be happier knowing that I have lost her through my own fault than through any fault of hers. Will you say all that to her, please?"

Mr. Gaisford said "yes" very gruffly, and slowly Rupert Holmes followed him, up stairs through the half-lighted drawing room, and out into the balcony. There he stood, looking over what he had said as he had last looked at it. Minute after minute passed; at last he said, "God help me, it is too much to expect; I have lost her forever!" and so he turned to go. Then he paused with a sound that was half sob, half cry, for at the window behind him stood a slight figure, timid and yet loving. Her arms were stretched out, and with a little cry of "O Rupert!" she fell into the arms that were to hold her evermore.

There was one passenger less by the early boat for Althorp, one more by train for Paris, and the Indian Bar, lost a promising recruit. Ten days after Rupert Holmes appeared in court as usual, to the surprise and disgust of many young barristers, who had met him abroad, that something or other had gone wrong with him, and that he was going to India. A gleam of hope came across them a month later, when he was again absent from his place; but this was shortly and forever dispelled by a brief announcement in the first column of the Times under the head "Marriages."—[Tinsley's Magazine.

A GREAT MEDICAL DISCOVERY

Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA VINEGAR BITTERS

J. WALKER, Proprietor. R. H. McDONALD & Co., Druggists & Gen. Agents, San Francisco, Cal., and 34 Commerce street, N. Y.

MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing, also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. Says a distinguished physiologist, there is scarcely an individual upon the face of the earth whose body is exempt from the presence of worms. It is not upon the healthy elements of the body that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and slimy deposits that breed these living monsters of disease. No System of Medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

OH, WOULD I WERE A CHILD AGAIN!

sighs the weary and exhausted one, as the languor and lassitude of spring comes upon him. Come and receive vigor and strength from the wonderful South American Tonic

JURUBEBA.

Long and successfully used in its native country, as a Powerful Tonic, and Potent Purifier of the Blood, it is found even to exceed the anticipations founded on its great reputation. According to the medical and scientific periodicals of London and Paris, it possesses the MOST POWERFUL TONIC properties known to MATERIA MEDICA.

Dr. Well's Extract of Jurubeba is a perfect remedy for all diseases of the BLOOD, ORGANIC WEAKNESS, GLANDULOUS TUMORS, DROPSY, SCROFULA, INTERNAL ABSCESSES, and will remove all obstructions of the LIVER, SPLEEN, INTESTINES, UTERINE and URINARY ORGANS.

It is strengthening and nourishing. Like nutritious food taken into the stomach, it assimilates and diffuses itself through the circulation, giving vigor and health.

It regulates the bowels, quiets the nerves, acts directly on the secretive organs, and, by its powerful Tonic and restoring effects, produces healthy and vigorous action to the whole system.

HALF A MILLION DELIGHTED READERS

of SOPHIE MAY'S POPULAR BOOKS, the "Dotty Dimple" and "Little Prudy Stories" for young people, will rejoice to learn that has been achieved by

"grown-up" story—

THE DOCTOR'S DAUGHTER

One Handsome Illustrated volume, cloth, $1.50, just issued, which has already had a very large sale and which is winning golden opinions from the critics of the press.

Do not fail to read it!

All the tenderness, earnestness, and jollity which characterize her writings for young folks, and which cause them to be as eagerly sought by parents as children, abound in this story for older readers.

"Bright as a sunbeam, natural as life itself, unpretending as real goodness, and sanitary as the personal effect of pure spring water."—Bost. Transcript.

"The book is made up of wholesome, commonplace experiences, so charmingly told that from first to last the interest never lessens."—Hearth and Home.

"All the young girls of our acquaintance pronounce it splendid."—Portland Transcript.

"The Doctor's Daughter" should be classed with such books as Mrs. Whitney's "Real Folks" and Miss Alcott's "Little Women," and high praise as it may seem, we feel inclined to say it is equal to either of the stories mentioned.—Crocker's Literary World.

In Press by the same Author, } "OUR HELEN."

Sold by all Booksellers and Newsdealers, and sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price, $1.50.

The virtues of simple Tea as a Hair Tonic and Preserver have long been known, but no attempts have been made to extract the oil scientifically.

By a process peculiar to this preparation, the Essential Oil of the Tea Plant has been added to other vegetable extracts, and an UNEQUALLED TOILET ARTICLE FOR THE HAIR IS THE RESULT.

It is especially useful to prevent the hair from falling out or growing thin, and as a wash for the scalp, to stimulate the hair bulbs and prevent the gradual decay and loss of color in the structure of the hair tubes. Price, $1.00.

"PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS."

Parties Decorating their Walls and Ceilings should carefully examine the merits of the WOOD HANGINGS and not accept the unfavorable reports of interested parties. Instead of throwing away your white doors or having them grained or putting in solid hard wood, you can have them covered with Wood Hangings, putting in solid mouldings, saving a great expense.

Office of JAMES Y. SMITH & NICHOLS, No. 55 Westminster Street. Providence, R. I., April 26, 1870.

CHARLES W. SPURR, Esq., 43 Summer St., Boston.

DEAR SIR:—Our Union Bank decorated their banking rooms with your Wood Hangings two years ago, which has been much admired. The work stands well, no showing of its giving out in any way. Hope you are successful in introducing the same.

Very truly,

JAMES Y. SMITH, President.

ERIE RAILWAY, JOHN S. DUNLAP, N. England Agent. 1?4 Washington Street, Boston, June 24, 1870.

CHARLES W. SPURR, Esq.,

DEAR SIR:—I have your favor of the 1st, referring to your Wood Hangings. About a year since I had it used in the dining room and halls of my house, and to date I am perfectly satisfied with it in every particular.

Very truly,

JOHN S. DUNLAP.

SELWYN'S THEATRE, MANAGER'S OFFICE. Boston, May 9th, 1870.

CHAS. W. SPURR,

SIR:—I wish to say that your Wood Hangings have been on the walls of the Vestibule of this Theatre since August, 1868, and have proved entirely satisfactory. As the walls were plastered, and the Vestibule very much exposed to the varied changes of the weather, there were serious doubts of the permanency of this style of decoration, but those doubts have been entirely removed. And the truth of this is manifest to the many who come to see and admire for themselves, and who admire its beauty and loveliness exceedingly.

I remain yours truly,

JOHN B. SELWYN.

TRANSCRIPT OFFICE, Boston, May 10, 1870.

CHAS. W. SPURR, Esq.,

DEAR SIR:—The Wood Hangings you put upon my house, No. 14 Montgomery Street, has stood the test of two years' use, to the entire satisfaction of the family. It is as firm on the wall as the day you left it. The heat or moisture has not caused the wood to peel in a single spot, and I see no reason why it will not remain so for years. I can cheerfully recommend its use to all, in preference to paper in a dining room.

Respectfully and truly yours,

H. W. DUTTON.

BOSTON, Dec. 24, 1870.

It is with the greatest pleasure we acknowledge the solid and elegant effect produced by your PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS in the halls, dining rooms, and vestibules of the "St. Cloud Hotel." In the construction of this building, we have, as trustees studied the most rigid economy consistent with durability; and it being within our own knowledge, that, for the past three years your woods had remained wholly unaffected by steam, furnace heat, and dampness, we had no hesitation in using them almost exclusively in the interior decoration. We heartily congratulate you upon the success with which you are meeting.

Very truly, GEORGE B. BIGELOW, For Trustees of Huffington Estate.

BOSTON, Nov. 15, 1870.

Since the first introduction of your "PATENT PAPERED WOOD HANGINGS" we have had you apply over six thousand (6,000) feet of Dadoe in Black Walnut, White Wood, Butternut and Oak; We have also used your Cedar and White Wood Hangings for Closets, Pantries, and Bath Rooms. Your work has proved to be unaffected by dampness, steam or furnace heat, and when the cost is far below solid wood, you are enabled to give us the choicest varieties. The work you have just finished for us exceeds in elegance of woods and workmanship, all your former efforts. Accept our congratulations in your present success, which must rapidly increase with a general appreciation of the elegance and durability of this mode of decoration.

Yours very truly, &c.,

BOURN & LEAVITT,

143 Mt. Vernon St., Boston.

These Wood Hangings are manufactured and for sale at No. 522 Harrison Avenue, Boston. Persons desiring to see these Hangings already, are will be referred to parties in Newport by inquiring at the DAILY NEWS OFFICE.
